Necklace:

Step #1: First, string all 100 beads onto the starting end of the crochet thread. If the bead holes are large enough, you might not need any tools. Otherwise you can thread the crochet thread through a sewing or beading needle. My favorite method instead is to apply some clear nail polish to the last 2 inches of the crochet thread tip. Once dried, it will stiffen the crochet thread nicely to be able to easily string the beads without the use of a needle. You can see how this is done in the video:

Step #2: Once all the beads are strung, take your D-size (3.25 mm) crochet hook and chain 1.

Step #3: Slide the first bead upwards on the string, right next to the starting chain1. Yarn over and pull through the loop on the hook. This is basically a chain 1, except it encases the bead. Chain 2.

Step #4: Slide the next bead upwards on the string, right next to the last chain. Yarn over and pull through the loop on the hook. Chain 2.

Step #5: Keep repeating Step #4 until your beaded chain is approximately 88 inches long (or the length you wish).

Step #6: After you string your last bead, just do a chain 1, cut your yarn about 8 inches from the end, and pull through the tail end to knot/secure it.

Step #7: Tie and knot both the beginning and ending tail ends together securely. Use a drop of clear nail polish or jewelry glue to secure the knot so it doesn't unravel.

Step #8: Wear your necklace as-is, or double it to shorten it. Or to make a choker (as in the sample), you can use either a round or oval necklace clasp to secure the ends. Another option includes using jump rings and a lobster clasp to permanently set the necklace size. You can see the various options available in the video: <http://youtube.com/naztazia>

Bracelet:

The bracelet is made in the same way as the necklace, except in the following steps - the measurements are different:

In Step #1, you will start off by stringing 50 beads.

In Step #5, the beaded chain will be 38 inches long (or the length you wish).
